DoD Ergonomics Working Group NEWS

Computer-Based Training Update:
How to Enroll In and Take the
DoD Ergonomics Awareness Course

This issue updates the registration and access information provided in the May 2008 issue of Ergo News.

Description

This course provides workers with knowledge of basic ergonomic principles, an understanding of work-related musculoskeletal disorders, and an awareness of the signs and symptoms of ergonomic risk factors. With this knowledge comes the ability to identify work activities with ergonomic risks, leading to early reporting and injury avoidance.

Registration and Access

1. Obtain a username and password from the Army Training Requirements and Resources System (ATRRS): https://www.atrrs.army.mil/

2. Access the Ergonomics Course Modules at the Defense Ammunition School website: http://ammo.okstate.edu/

For your assistance, a PowerPoint presentation illustrating the registration and course access is attached to this newsletter at our website: www.ergoworkinggroup.org

When you successfully complete the course and assessment, you will be able to print and save a completion certificate for your training records.

Course Fees

This course is FREE for all DoD employees. All non-DoD employees (those without a ".mil" email address) are required to pay a $500 course fee.

More Information

If you have questions or need additional information, please contact the Ergonomics Program at the U.S. Army Center for Health Promotion and Preventive Medicine: 410-436-3928.